

Preston, Jan'y 5th 1837.

Dear & dear Sir, I have been happy to learn that your Meetinghouse has been open to the free discussion of the great & holy subject of the equal, heaven-bestowed rights of man. Mr. H.B. Stanton and Mr. Thos. Dredge are spending a few days in this County & have spoken, as I have witnessed on several occasions, with excellent effect.

Monday afternoon & evening, Sunderland, they will be at liberty to lecture in Leicestershire & will consent to do so, if invited.

~~left~~ Mr. Dredge's story, shameful, not to him, but to his persecutors, is undoubtedly familiar to you. He relates it, not to avenge the wrath & revenge & to lead to deeds of blood, as would one not imbued with the spirit of Christ, but to prove, as this one fact does prove, a flood of light on the Anti-Christian & Anti-Republican tendencies of Slavery; for, if the system the practice reducing men professing godlike to enact such a deed, what evil may it not beget! Pardon my seeming to reason with one who needs no new argument in the cause of the infinitely outraged slave.

Very resp'yde. C.P. Grosvenor
